

The Wonders of California

There are three places that make California a great state. San Diego, the Golden Gate Bridge, and San Juan Capistrano are the wonders of California. They are the wonders of California because they are amazing, fun, and my favorite places to visit. Also, they are good places to get your picture taken. The picture of you in California will be a wonder of California and a good memory.

San Diego has a big zoo. I have been there one time. I liked seeing the tigers, lions, giraffes, flamingos, elephants, and monkeys. There are fun things to do; like you can grab some meat and put it in a place for the tiger or lion to eat. Then you watch them eat. You can ride horses. You can put horse food on top of an ice cream cone and feed it to the horse. The horse will eat the whole thing. The zoo is a wonder of California that you will never forget.

One of the most famous places and a wonder of California is the Golden Gate Bridge. It is famous because it's the biggest bridge in the world. It was built 100 years ago. It was a dangerous project because a lot of workers died when they were building the bridge. I respect the builders because the Golden Gate Bridge would not be standing today if they all died. Thank God not all the workers fell in the water.

San Juan Capistrano is the third famous wonder of California. It is a quaint village where many animals live there. One kind of animal is one of the most beautiful birds: the swallow. Every year the swallows fly south when winter begins, and goes back when it is spring. It is a wonder they are able to fly lots of miles to go back to the mission when it is cold. They are smart birds.

These three places are my favorite wonders of California. People should visit these places. Go see the animals in the zoo. When you see the bridge, you will be shocked at the size and you cannot imagine it. It is a good place to take many pictures of the beautiful sea. The mission is very famous for having a lot of animals. Go see it!
